Are you interested in your child’s speech and language development?

- If so, your child may be able to participate in a UND research program that studies how children learn to produce sounds!
- We’re looking for children between the ages of 3 and 7 years who speak English only.
- This study requires a one-time visit of two hours to UND. Your child will receive a brief speech evaluation and then participate in a non-invasive brain wave study. Your child will receive $20 for participating.
- For more information, please contact Dr. Alycia Cummings, Assistant Professor in the UND Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders:
