Annual reviews cover the previous academic year.

Triennial reviews cover the previous three academic years. (Does not include the year in which the review is being conducted.)

Triennial reviews are to cover a period of three full academic years.

If on developmental leave; that year does NOT count as an active year for evaluation purposes. For example, a triennial evaluation could cover a four-year period if the faculty member was on DL one of those years.

Undergoing review for Promotion "restarts" the clock for triennial review.
