Chair’s Introduction

Crime, punishment and justice are perennially fascinating topics. Perhaps only love has provided more fruitful soil for artists or been a greater inspiration for storytelling. Of course, even casual observers of our public life can see that a better understanding of crime and justice is more important than ever. Thankfully, the University of North Dakota has some of the most committed and able students of these issues in the region and the country. Our students are law enforcement officers, community and institutional correctional employees, forensic scientists, lawyers, victims’ advocates, criminal justice policy analysts, professors and more. Over the past year roughly 50 more UND students were awarded the Bachelors of Science in Criminal Justice Studies and are ready to begin making invaluable contributions to our criminal justice system. Several more received their Ph.D.s in Criminal Justice and are already helping to educate a new generation of students. You can find the names of all our recent graduates later in this newsletter.

The criminal justice faculty at UND couldn’t be more happy or proud to work with all of our students. But, as you’ll see in this newsletter, the faculty have a number of accomplishments to be proud of themselves. Near the top of the list are several seed grants that were awarded to Drs. Wendelin Hume and Adam Matz to, respectively, examine critical criminal justice system needs in North Dakota and to validate the risk assessment instrument used in a local community correctional setting. The initial stages of research that these awards make possible should provide the foundations for more extensive research agendas into these vitally important areas. Dr. Matz was also awarded the Michael C. Braswell/Routledge Outstanding Dissertation Award in 2018 for the research he conducted to cap his Ph.D. education. And, since we are talking about awards, it should be noted that one of our Ph.D. students, Tara Lulla, was selected to participate in the Academy of Criminal Justice Science's Doctoral Student Summit in New Orleans.

Finally, it is my pleasure to acknowledge the educational legacy that has been created and continues through the selfless acts of donors. Dr. John and Carlyn Dalness continue to fund a scholarship originally established in the name of a UND alum, the Earl and Irene Dalness Memorial Scholarship. The Dalness Scholarship has helped support University of North Dakota criminal justice students for decades and thanks to the kind gifts of John and Carlyn that profoundly valuable tradition will reach well into the future. A new and unique legacy has just been created by another University of North Dakota alumnus (John was a Fish and Wildlife major, 1971); the Barbara J. and John W. Weisser Criminal Justice Scholarship will help support its first criminal justice student in the coming academic year. Along with donors like Beverly Larson and Reyne Richter, many criminal justice students will enjoy financial support for years to come. On behalf of the students, faculty and staff of UND's Criminal Justice Department, we thank you all!

Martin Gottschalk Ph. D.

Alumni Spotlight

Jason Twede

Prior to doing his graduate studies at UND, Dr. Twede worked as a prosecutor in Navajo County, Arizona. His dissertation focuses on the history of prosecution in the United States and its transformation into an institution run solely by the state, and some of his current research projects further examine the causes and consequences of this phenomenon. Since graduating in 2016 Dr. Twede taught at The University of Akron before taking a position at Utah State University.

F. Matt Jones

Dr. Jones is an Assistant Professor at the University of Oklahoma School of Criminal Justice. Matt also received his doctorate from UND in 2016. He spent nearly a decade working in a variety of secure treatment settings for juveniles, and as a state social worker.

Prior to his graduate studies he had worked as a clinical therapist with sexually abusive youth in an intensive residential setting. His dissertation research is a test of Durkheim's theory of anomie through the exploration of rates of violent crime, suicide, and oil worker deaths in the Bakken region of western North Dakota.

Faculty Spotlight

Rachel Jordan

Ms. Rachel Jordan joined the faculty as an instructor for the department in the fall of 2016. In addition to her seven years of work as a police officer with the Fargo Police Department, she has nearly a decade of teaching experience that includes prior work experience with Minnesota State University and North Dakota State University. Her teaching interests have included introductory courses in criminal justice, policing, and corrections; as well as criminal investigation, and cybersecurity.

Her research interests have included focal areas concerning police officer stress and workload in relation to the oil boom in western North Dakota, including a coauthored publication in the prestigious journal Police Quarterly.

Doctoral Student Spotlight

Tami Lieberg

Ms. Tami Lieberg is a doctoral student possessing over two decades of work experience with the Tri-County Community Corrections agency, serving three Minnesota Counties (Norman, Polk, and Red Lake), where she has supervised both adult and juvenile probationers and parolees. For nearly 15 years she has been in a leadership position as a chief probation officer. She has participated in drug task forces and also served as a trainer on evidence-based practices (EBP) and programs including risk assessment, gender-based programming, and motivational interviewing. Further, her master's thesis focused on risk assessment in probation, specifically the application of the Level of Service Inventory-Revised (LSI-R) instrument in three rural counties of Minnesota. She has also supervised a jail chemical dependency program, diversion program, school probation officers, intensive supervision, court and pre-trial programs, mental health programs, sex offender programs, as well as worked on both federal and state grant writing and evaluation projects. Finally, she has also worked with the crisis intervention team for northern Minnesota law enforcement.

Her current research focuses on critical incident management, secondary and vicarious trauma, posttraumatic stress disorders (PTSD), and addiction.

Student Groups

Alpha Pi Omega (APiO)

The Alpha Pi Omega sorority is the country's oldest Native American greek letter organization. The mission of the sorority is to support college women in today's society. The sorority works to preserve Native American traditions. For more information about APiO at UND contact Dr. Wendelin Hume at wendelin.hume@UND.edu or by phone at 701.777.4001.

Alpha Phi Sigma (APS) Criminal Justice Honor Society

Alpha Phi Sigma is the only criminal justice honor society which is a certified member of the Association of College Honor Societies. It is also affiliated with the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences (ACJS), one of the two largest associations within the criminal justice profession. For more information about APS at UND contact Dr. Roni Mayzer at roni.mayzer@UND.edu or by phone at 701.777.2078.

Criminal Justice Association (CJA)

The Criminal Justice Association typically meets twice a month to discuss criminal justice issues. Members also participate in volunteer activities in the community including trips, fundraising, and the provision of guest speakers. For more information on CJA contact Dr. Martin Gottschalk at martin.gottschalk@UND.edu or by phone at 701.777.3639 or Rachel Jordan at rachel.jordan@UND.edu or 701.777.5361.

Native Americans into Criminal Justice Association (NACJA)

The Native Americans into Criminal Justice Association serves to enhance and support the benefits of diversity in criminal justice at UND. The purpose of NACJA is to improve recruitment of Native American students in the criminal justice program, improve retention, and promote a better understanding of cultures between Native Americans, students, faculty, and staff. For more information about NACJA contact Dr. Wendelin Hume at wendelin.hume@UND.edu or by phone at 701.777.4001.

The Native Americans into Criminal Justice Association (NACJA) had two booths for the Halloween event in 2017 in association with the University of North Dakota Indian Association (UNDIA).

Student Advising

Prospective undergraduate or graduate students are always welcome to visit the department to learn about its course offerings as well as faculty teaching and research interests. To schedule a meeting please contact Joyce Zak, Administrative Assistant, at joyce.zak@UND.edu.

For currently enrolled undergraduate students considering Criminal Justice Studies (CJS) as an area they would like to formally pursue please contact Kayla Hotvedt, Academic Advisor, at kayla.hotvedt@UND.edu. Students are encouraged to declare their major as soon as possible to obtain pre-CJ status. Students are formally admitted to the CJS major once students complete 45 total credit hours with a minimum overall grade point average (GPA) of 2.70, including completion of the following four courses (with a minimum GPA of 2.70 also);

- Introduction to Criminal Justice (CJ 201)
- Introduction to Policing (CJ 210)
- Introduction to Courts (CJ 220)
- Introduction to Corrections (CJ 270)

Once admitted, students will be assigned an advisor from the Department of Criminal Justice faculty. Students must maintain a minimum GPA of 2.70 to remain in good academic standing. Finally, undergraduate students must also complete a concentration which can be satisfied by one of three options: 1) language proficiency of level IV in a modern foreign language, 2) completion of the four course sequence in American Sign Language; or 3) 20 credit hours (at least nine of which must be numbered 300 or above) in any single subject matter taught at UND.

Undergraduate students with a major in another field may also consider completing a minor in CJS, which requires 21 credit hours. Twelve of the 21 credit hours are completed by taking the required prerequisite courses listed previously. The other 9 credit hours must include three criminal justice electives. A full listing of courses is available on the departmental website.
